VILLA CIELOMAR

PENINSULA PAPAGAYO, GUANACASTE

Villa Cielomar is an exquisite contemporary estate belonging to the prestigious peninsula Papagayo in the northwest corner of Costa Rica's Guanacaste province. Presenting a veritable tropical paradise in one of the world's latest private luxury sanctuaries, the property faces the ocean from a cape three hundred feet above sea level.

Villa Cielomar's dramatically beautiful surroundings are matched by equally striking bold architecture, thematically resembling a bow and arrow. Bold and contemporary, the semi-circle structure features a narrow floating walkway, acting as the "arrow" extending above the bottom deck to the edge of the property. The interiors are immaculately presenting the height of sleek contemporary design, enhancing a sense of space, with soaring slanted ceilings, immense glass walls facing the ocean, and opulent modern chandeliers dangling above the common spaces. The living areas present the height of luxury under the sheer size and majesty of the space, sparsely but choicely furnished in pristine white with radiant orange accent decor. The ultra-private master suite boasts access to a sunken Zen garden with an outdoor shower opening off from the master bathroom, imbuing the home with exoticism. The additional five bedrooms are refined to perfection with enormous wall-sized windows and impeccable wood detailing, grounding the rooms with a sense of comfort. The complex features a state-of-the-art media room and a private gym.

The outdoor wooden deck has to be seen to be believed. An elevated platform stretches out boldly towards stunning unobstructed ocean panoramas. An infinity-edge pool meets the ocean horizon, embedded in an expansive outdoor space covered by artful orange sails suspended from columns. Sun loungers and dining sets make up the ultimate alfresco venue, with Villa Cielomar standing as a veritable feat of luxury beach architecture.
